THAT LITTLE SHEET.

Reader, has it ever been your lot to witness the agonizing writhings of a worm in hot sand? Did you ever notice the frantic twistings it made to get out? If you have, you can fully appreciate the lamentable position the Tribune and with it the rest of the Democratic press out of the immediate South, is in now. We say out of the immediate South because there the hot sand is essential to their happiness. The cause which produces this squirming is the rabid utterances of the radical Demo-Confederate party as set forth by the Okolona States and a few more men and papers of that stripe. The Tribune of yesterday contains a whole column of these contortions. After a due consideration of the matter that goes to make up that column we are unable to discover anything to controvert our former remarks on this subject. This article is the follower of one in that paper published a few mornings ago, stating that the States had sold out to Gen. J. S. Robinson, of Ohio, the Chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of that State. Now we would like to know, in the first place, whether or not an honest man could sell out? That he could not will be the verdict of every sensible man. We so considered the matter and gave some extracts from Mississippi papers to prove that his contemporaries were fully convinced that the proprietor was an honest man. The Tribune is convinced, also, and says: "Col. Harper is said to be a brave, honorable man." * * * "His private character is said to be unimpeachable." * * * "Harper, the editor" (and it might have added, proprietor) "is a man of correct private character." * * * Yes, he is a man of good character and yet the Tribune would have the people believe that a man of "correct, private character" has sold out his opinions and devoted his paper to treason against its party and fidelity to the Republicans. Will anybody be deceived? We opine not. The editor, or one of them, for they are many, the ostensible editor of the Tribune may deny that the States reflects the sentiments of its party until he is black in the face, until he hears the roaring of a thousand cataracts in his ears, until his eyes stand out like the bumps on a black oak, but he can not make sensible men doubt it. Now it may be asked why it is that we give so much time and space to a little paper published in a little town in Mississippi. The answer is: A metropolitan paper moulds public opinion; a country paper follows it. The States gives us an insight into the feelings, passions and purposes of the South. The South rules, nay, is the Democratic party and what it desires the whole party desires. We wish to keep before our Republican friends the fact that the same principles and the same men they battled in 1861-65 are once more to the front, and the contest is the same, with only a difference in means. The old rebel spirit is revived, and the old State's Rights principles, with their threats of secession and kindred evils, will be one of the issues. It is not only the States that gives these battle-cries publicity. Has the speeches of Blackburn and his fierce Brigadier followers during this extra session been forgotten? No. Have the threats to starve the Government been forgotten? No. Have the treasonable sayings, treasonable anywhere except in the United States, been forgotten? No. An awful "No" was thundered forth in the last elections. The Democratic home of Thurman said "No." The towns of Indiana, Ohio, New Jersey and other States said "No." Michigan said "No." The whole United States will say "No" in 1880.

Here is an address delivered in Augusta, Ga., and received with deafening applause. We have published it before, but the Tribune's assertion concerning the States will make it timely. Observe:

"We have no apologies to offer for our course, nor for the cause in which we died. We believed it was right then, and we believe it is right today. We will not sacrifice principle for policy. Speak not of it to us as lost. Weighed down by false issues, it became war wearied, and war accomplished what war could do. But it will live on and never die."

What more has the States said? Mr. Blackburn said:

"We do not intend to stop until we have stricken from the statute-book the last vestige of war-measures. Like these, which had been born of passion, incident to civil strife, and looked alone to the abridgement of the liberty of the citizen."

The Chicago Times, from which the Tribune clipped yesterday in its Okolona article, in commenting on the paragraph clipped above, says:

"Says Mr. Blackburn, the Rhetorical Hamlet from Kentucky, 'We do not intend to stop until we have stricken from the statute-book the last vestige of war-measures from the statute-book.' And Mr. Blackburn professes to speak for his party. If he speaks for authority, the country must understand that it is the purpose of the Bourbon party, under the leadership of the Confederate Brigadiers, of whom Blackburn is one, to strike from the statute-book all laws made for the enforcement of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution. All these Amendments and the laws made in pursuance thereof, are war measures, and Mr. Blackburn threatens to strike the last vestige of them from the statute-book."

The Chicago Times, it must be remembered is a Democratic journal, and the Tribune is so far in accord with it as to quote it to fortify its position. Is it necessary to say more? Shall we give any other reasons for noticing a contemptible little sheet representing a contempt-party?

THE VETO.

Extracts from the Metropolitan Press.

New York Evening Post.

The President's second veto message is more direct, distinct and forcible than the first. The proposed provisions of law in respect to military interference with the elections were presented to him last week as a separate measure, so that the objections to the form of legislation which applied to it in the House of Representatives were avoided, and he was enabled to consider the provisions upon their merits. The message divided itself naturally into two parts: that in which his own position toward the use of troops at the polls is declared, and that in which the effect of existing laws and of the veto bill upon the subject is set forth.

Whatever the politicians and hair-splitters may say, that part will have great weight with the people. If this is not the purpose, if the object is only to prevent military interference with the freedom of elections, let Congress give heed to the President when he says that he "shall find no difficulty in concurring in any additional legislation limited to that object," and let it legislate accordingly.

New York Tribune.

If the constitutional provision which gives the President authority to review measures of legislation adopted by the two houses of Congress had no other merit to recommend it, we should regard it as a valuable safeguard against the excesses of demagogues and reckless partisans on account of its usefulness in correcting misapprehensions and stripping off disguises. The Democratic party in Congress has been making a determined campaign against the Federal election laws, but making it through a series of false pretences. The property and necessity of the laws are so well understood by everybody that a direct movement for their repeal would be dangerous. The Democratic party, therefore, under cover of a pretext which the leaders neither believe in themselves nor believe that their followers believe in, to obstruct the execution of the laws so that they may be practically inoperative. The Democrats have also been making a campaign against the general authority of the Federal Government to enforce its own statutes and defend its own life; but that also, since the question involved is popularly supposed to be one of the war, is a dangerous undertaking to be risked openly, and again they resort to subterfuge and stratagem. The debate has been conducted from the recesses of the Congress and has been pushed toward false conclusions.

The President's clear and ringing veto message is like the voice of a giant calling back the disputants to the question before them. They are models of that most effective style of argument which consists in a simple exposition of the matter in debate.

No man can read the brief but exceedingly forcible message of the President, voting the Democratic caucus, without being grateful to him for his firmness in resisting the destruction of National authority. The law which this caucus bill proposes to have been on the statute books ever since the days of Washington, was subsequently enlarged and re-enacted under Jefferson, and again enacted under Lincoln. It is a measure of the highest importance, and has been pushed toward false conclusions.

St Louis Globe Democrat.

President Hayes vetoed the bill entitled, "An act to prohibit military interference with elections," yesterday. His message, vetoing the army bill, ten days ago, contained the clearest exposition then made of the reasons why that measure, with its political rider to paralyze the arm of the Government on National election days, should not become a law, and his message of yesterday is equally clear and convincing in its arguments against the States rights doctrine.

Ladies

Do you want a pure, blooming complexion? If so, a few applications of Hagan's MAGNOLIA BALM will gratify you to your heart's content. It does away with Saltness, Redness, Pimples, Blotches, and all diseases and imperfections of the skin. It overcomes the flushed appearance of heat, fatigue and excitement. It makes a lady of THIRTY appear but TWENTY; and so natural, gradual, and perfect are its effects, that it is impossible to detect its application.

What the more has the States said? Mr. Blackburn said:

"We do not intend to stop until we have stricken from the statute-book the last vestige of war-measures. Like these, which had been born of passion, incident to civil strife, and looked alone to the abridgement of the liberty of the citizen."

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Family Physic, and for curing Constipation, Jaundice, Indigestion, Puff Swelling, Bloating, Headache, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Dropsy, Worms, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, for Purifying the Blood.

Are the most effective and gentle purgatives ever discovered. They are mild, but effectual in their operation, moving the bowels surely and without pain. Although gentle in their operation, they are still the most thorough and searching cathartic medicine that can be employed: cleansing the stomach and bowels, and even the blood. In small doses of one pill a day, they stimulate the digestive organs and promote vigorous health.

AYER'S PILLS have been known for more than a quarter of a century, and have obtained a world-wide reputation for their virtues. They correct diseased action in the system, assimilate food, and give the body, and are so composed that obstructions within their range can rarely withstand or evade them. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of everybody, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are, at the same time, the safest and best physic for children. By their aperient action they grip less than the common purgatives, and never give pain when the bowels are not inflamed. They reach the vital fountains of the blood, and strengthen the system by freeing it from the elements of weakness.

Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel nor any deleterious drug, these PILLS may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar-coating preserves them ever fresh, and makes them pleasant to take; while being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.
